Increased frustration with Washington outside and inside the beltway and fresh announcements of political retirements put the future of both political parties in question. What is the outlook for the upcoming 2010 elections? Can Pres. Obama create a true bipartisan dialogue in Washington? And can Congress come together long enough to pass a jobs bill and health care reform? Our political roundtable weighs in: Washington Post Columnist E.J. Dionne, Wall Street Journal Columnist Peggy Noonan, Chairman of the House Republican Conference, Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) and Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, Rep. Chris Van Hollen (D-MD).
